NATURAL WINE . 16 MM . FEMALE DRIVEN

Brasil, 2025.

Isabel, a sommelière in fine dining scene, is ready to break free from her domineering chef boss and start something of her own: a wine bar where she decides what goes in the glass. Courting an investor, she takes the first steps, even as financial backing remains frustratingly out of reach.

Once her passion collides with the reality of starting an independent business, Isabel is forced to confront the line between calculated risk and reckless abandon. In a world where success can turn sour as quickly as an uncorked bottle left out too long, Isabel takes her one and only chance to pour her future on her own terms.

TIMELY ISSUES . HISTORICAL . ARCHIVES

During the years 1958 to 1989, the Swedish public broadcaster SVT's reporting from Israel and Palestine was unique.

Their reporters were constantly present in the war-affected region, documenting everything from everyday life to international crises. This extensive treasure of footage makes up the material for Goran Hugo Olsson's new film, where footage of the rise of the Israeli state is interwoven with the Palestinian struggle for independence. News coverage with Yasser Arafat and interviews with Israeli foreign minister Abba Eban during a visit to Sweden are parts of exclusive archive material that has not been shown since first broadcast.
